

5 Reasons To Amend Your Estate Plan

It's 2016...do you know where your estate plan is? If you're like most busy people, you may have made a will, perhaps when your children were born, and it's possible you've taken other steps to lay out what will happen after you're gone. But frequently those plans are just gathering dust.

Now's a good time to crack open the vault and take a closer look. Typically, your estate plan will need a minor update, and in some cases a complete overhaul may be in order. Consider these five reasons to revise your plan:

1. Family changes: Your personal situation may have shifted because of a divorce, a separation, or the death of a spouse. You might want to add or subtract beneficiaries to trusts or estates if children or grandchildren have been born since you created your estate plan or if a beneficiary has died. Or your intended heirs may have married or divorced, further complicating matters.

2. Financial changes: When you created your estate plan, you probably owned fewer assets or different assets than you have now. You may need to revise your will or trust documents, especially if the value has changed dramatically. Or perhaps you've acquired a business interest or sold one—another potentially big change to your financial status. A job loss or change also could have an impact on your plan.

3. Tax law changes: It seems like the federal estate tax law is amended every other year, so it's important to keep abreast of the latest developments. For instance, your estate plan may not reflect the ever-increasing federal estate tax exemption. The exemption, which was $650,000 a decade and a half ago, has ballooned to $5.45 million for someone who dies in 2016. Other tax law provisions, such as the "portability" of exemptions between the estates of you and your spouse, also may need to be addressed.

4. Geographic changes: If you've pulled up stakes and moved the homestead, maybe downsizing to a place in a warmer climate, this significant change also probably needs to be reflected in your estate plan—especially if you've moved to a state with substantially different tax laws.

5. Personal changes: Finally, you may have had a change of heart about beneficiaries or developed different priorities or preferences. For example, you might decide to cut a daughter-in-law or son-in-law out of your will or decide to attach conditions to particular gifts or bequests. It's your estate plan, so you can "fix" it however you like.

Of course, you don't have to undertake all of this on your own. Rely on your financial, tax, and legal advisers for guidance. ●

10 Common Scams

after the death of a loved one. It's not unusual for a criminal to pretend to be a banker or other professional to coerce you to hand over funds. Rely on reputable financial planners you know and trust and close family members to steer you in the right direction.

8. Medical ID theft. ID theft often is associated with financial information, but loss of medical information can be just as damaging. Just imagine someone running up costs for expensive drugs, doctor visits, and even surgery under your name. What's more, unlike theft of credit card data, you're often held liable for these purchases. Don't volunteer your particulars (for example, Social Security and insurance account numbers) unless you're certain it's for a valid reason. Check with your insurer about any charges you don't understand.

9. Gift card vouchers. If you're targeted for this scam, you receive an unsolicited email offering you a free gift card from a well-known retailer or restaurant if you click on a link. It can look legitimate—the scammers will go to great lengths to replicate logos and corporate designs—but often it isn't. Clicking on the link will install malware on your computer that can siphon away personal data. No matter how appealing an offer is, don't click on links you have not verified.

10. Counterfeit apps. Finally, in a highly publicized incident, Apple developed some applications that were found to contain vicious malware that spied on consumers. While Apple believes it has purged these malicious apps, similar occurrences could lead to loss of personal data. Try to use only well-known apps and consider reading reviews before purchasing them. These are just 10 of the scams currently making the rounds. Be on your guard and be skeptical of anything that doesn't seem just right. ●
