

Saving Is Not Enough

After two financial crises occurring almost back to back during the “lost decade,” investors have every right to be risk-averse, hesitant, angry, or distrustful. The problem with not investing at all, however, is that you may not have sufficient money to achieve your financial goals. An individual saving $100 per month, without investing, would have put away only $52,400 since 1970. By placing that money in five-year fixed-term investments, the investor would have been able to end up with almost five times that amount. And if invested in a diversified portfolio, our investor’s savings would have grown to $835,313. It’s true that any investment involves varying levels of risk. But, as the image illustrates, even if you have low risk tolerance, you can find a suitable investment for your needs that may still be much better than no investment at all.

Two Types of Investments Versus Saving Without Investment, Jan 1970–Aug 2013

Past performance is no guarantee of future results. This hypothetical example is for illustrative purposes only and not indicative of any investment. An investment cannot be made directly in an index. Holding a portfolio of securities for the long term does not ensure a profitable outcome and investing in securities always involves risk of loss. The diversified portfolio was created for illustrative purposes only; it is neither a recommendation, nor an actual portfolio. Government bonds are guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the United States government as to the timely payment of principal and interest, while stocks are not guaranteed and have been more volatile than bonds. International investments involve special risks such as fluctuations in currency, foreign taxation, economic and political risks, and differences in accounting and financial standards. Diversification does not eliminate the risk of experiencing investment losses. The data assumes reinvestment of income and does not account for taxes or transaction costs.
